Local Color to Balkan Wars.

A number of local people are especially interested in the Balkan war situation because D. Atanasoff, for some time a resident in Irasburg, and known in this section of Orleans county, is now in the far East and having a more or less prominent part in the relief work there. He is a native of Bulgaria but married Miss Lucy Wheeler of Irasburg, who has a sister, Miss Mary Wheeler in Barton. Mr. and Mrs. Atanasoff went back to Bulgaria to live two years ago.

At the outbreak of the war he became interested in relief work and accompanied Noel Buxton, a member of the British Parliament through the Balkan war region as interpreter for the English nobleman, who was sent there by the British government to investigate the situation for Great Britain.

He was then appointed treasurer of the relief committee of the Christian Herald at Sofia, Bulgaria, his picture appearing in that paper several times with other members of the relief committee. He has been on a horseback trip through Macedonia and Serbia making investigations, distributing relief and taking photographs for the Christian Herald and is all the time occupied with this great work.

HIGH WATER DOES DAMAGE.

While Ohio and Indiana were suffering the loss of lives by the thousands in floods that literally covered miles of those states and arose in the streets of Dayton, Columbus, and other cities from 10 to 15 feet, destroying probably $25,000,000 worth of property Vermont experienced high water. So far as Orleans county goes we learn of no large losses although highways were badly gullied and a good many culverts washed out. A little further south, along the Passumpsic and Connecticut rivers, considerable damage was done. Still further south on the Connecticut, towns suffered damage from high water.

Washouts on the railroad between West Burke and Lyndonville and between St. Johnsbury and Wells River and later on the Maine Central near Concord, resulted in practically annulled train schedules three days last week. Traffic reaching this section from below St. Johnsbury reached here by making a detour to Montpelier Junction, Essex Junction, Cambridge Junction and to St. Johnsbury over the St. J. and L. C. road. Traffic over the Barnet washout was not resumed until Monday. No such tie-up in traffic has been experienced for years.

Dams were carried out at Concord, East Barnet and other places in Vermont and a covered highway bridge went out at White River Junction. Several villages were flooded. Parts of St. Johnsbury was flooded at times, Barnet was partly under water at one stage of the flood and Mrs. Campbell, telephone operator there stuck to her post one night while water entirely surrounded the building and she was alone. At Gaysville a sawmill and two barns were swept down the White river.

The west side of the state also suffered. Both the C. V. and Rutland railroads were tied up with washouts at times. From Friday night, March 21 to Thursday, the 27th, rain fell most of the time and only lulled by spells. These cessations probably saved much more damage.

At one time it was thought the large dam of the Chittenden Light and Power Company would go out, a few miles above Rutland, which would have flooded that city. At Montpelier pumps were used in the basements of many buildings and considerable damage was done.

Rutland was entirely isolated from train service most of one day as was Brattleboro, and Burlington was served only by the Rutland road one day.

The precarious condition of the railroad tracks along the Connecticut river was emphatically shown Sunday morning when one of the largest engines of the Central Vermont plunged into about 50 feet of water in the river about two miles north of East Putney. The crew had been stalled at North Walpole, N. H., during the flood and started from Bellows Falls for Brattleboro just after a passenger train had pulled north over the road. A stretch of roadbed over 135 feet in length slid into the river, plunging the engine and caboose down with it.

Firemen Perritt lost his life in the accident, but the rest of the crew escaped.

DIES FROM POISONING

Mrs. W. O. Cole, Well Known in Barton Dies from Arsenic Poisoning at Lyndonville under Suspicious Circumstances. Mr. Cole Arrested and Lodged in Jail.

Mrs. W. O. Cole, about 32 years of age, well known in Barton and surrounding towns, died from arsenic poisoning Friday afternoon at Lyndonville, where she had just returned to live with Mr. Cole, after they had lived separate for more than a year and a half. Some suspicious circumstances surround the death and State's Attorney Dutton of Caledonia county caused the arrest of Mr. Cole and he has been lodged in Caledonia county jail awaiting a hearing.

Mr. Cole is also well known in Barton, having run the pool room in the Pierce and Barrows building in Barton for some time previous to his marriage to Mrs. Cole in April, 1910. After living together for a time Mr. Cole went to Lyndonville where he has been clerking in Dwinell's drug store since and Mrs. Cole took up nursing which she has followed until about two weeks ago when she went to Lyndonville to live with her husband. Reports are in circulation that a loan was being negotiated on one of the life insurance policies but that the money had not arrived at the time of her death.

Mrs. Cole was formerly Miss Charlotte Gove of Wentworth, N. H., where her parents now live. She came to Barton some ten years ago and married E. A. Walcott. After Mr. Walcott's death she married Mr. Cole. A son, Reginald Walcott is living with his grandparents at Wentworth and owing to physical ailments will probably never be able to care for himself.

Mr. Cole says that upon his return home for supper Friday evening he found Mrs. Cole dead in bed. He summoned Dr. Copeland, who pronounced suicide from poisoning and the body was prepared for burial and sent to Wentworth the next day for interment. Later suspicion fell upon Mr. Cole and he was arrested in Wentworth where he went to attend the funeral and before his return to Lyndonville. It is said a messenger who delivered a telephone message to Mrs. Cole between 2 o'clock and 3 o'clock Friday afternoon saw her, and while she was sick and had been for a day, she appeared then to be normal in every way.

While Mr. Cole was always known by the name "Cole" in this vicinity it is understood upon very good authority that his real name was "Coleman" and that he changed to "Cole" when he came to Barton from Rhode Island. Drs. Stone and Whitney of the state laboratory have gone to Wentworth to exhume the body of Mrs. Cole and an autopsy will be held.

Mr. Cole has retained Cook & Norton as counsel.

The Lyndonville paper says: "Cole and his wife had not been living happily together. In his talk with Dr. Copeland Cole said that during the night before they had some talk about certain matters and his wife not appearing well and being uneasy, he got up and called a doctor, and explained as best he could the trouble would probably wear away with a little sleep but if anything more serious developed to call again and he would come to see her. It was not found necessary to call the doctor again. The next day she remained in her bed and died about the middle of the afternoon."

"Mrs. Neagle was in the room a short time Friday morning. Mrs. Cole was crying and feeling badly, and she spoke of having had some unpleasant words with her husband during the night and that she couldn't understand him."

Chas. Burdick and Gladys Woodard of Danville are visiting their cousins, Gustavus and Martha Burdick.

ORLEANS COUNTY COURT.

The case of H. D. Stannard vs. M. L. and H. W. Tillotson on trial last week was not finished until Monday of this week. It will be remembered this is a case in which the town of Lowell sued the Tillotsons, in the name of Stannard, for certain receipted property of the town sued Mr. Stannard for alleged misappropriations of town funds. The defendants claimed that by subsequent attachments of Stannard's property in the Hinds, Lambert and Barton bank cases and also by the bankruptcy proceedings against Stannard they were released from their action as receptors for the property. Young & Young appeared for the plaintiff and J. W. Redmond for the defendant. The court directed the jury to return a verdict for the plaintiff and the jury awarded the plaintiff about $6000. It is understood the case will go to the supreme court.

The case now on trial is Phoebe Leach vs. Blair Veneer Company of North Troy. It appears that a log from a pile of logs in their yard became detached and fell into the highway and the plaintiff in driving along the highway ran into the log and demands damages of the defendants. F. S. Rogers and H. B. Howe for the plaintiff and J. W. Redmond for the defendant.

The only other case for jury trial this term is Lucy Brown vs. Grand Trunk and B. & M. railroads.

Wise to Build to Quarries.

The Barre Daily Times commenting on the vote of Barton Village to extend a power line to our granite quarries says: "After voting almost unanimously against selling their municipal electric light and power plant on town meeting day, the voters of Barton voted unanimously to extend the power line of the same to Barton mountain, the source of Barton granite, appropriating perhaps $2,500 for the extension with the possibility of a return of $600 yearly. An extension of that sort would be a very paying venture for the electric light plant, it would seem, and at the same time materially assist a home industry which has a chance to be developed. In voting for the outlay needed for the extension to the granite quarries, the voters of Barton showed their wisdom."

This coming from a paper in the largest granite center in the world is appreciated.

AWFUL FLOODS IN MIDDLE WEST.

Although the number of dead and extent of property damage done by the floods in Ohio, Indiana and other sections of the Middle West is not yet known, the dead will probably number about 1000 and the property damage cannot be even approximated but has been placed at one hundred millions. Dayton, Cincinnati, Zanesville and Columbus, Ohio, perhaps suffered the most serious all of the towns and cities of the Ohio river valley suffered damage from floods that wrecked buildings, manufacturing plants, power and light stations, telephone and telegraph lines, railroads and actually shut that territory out from the rest of the world for several days. The work of burying the dead was a large one. Dead animals in the streets of many cities and towns raised the fear of plague and the need of food, clothing and other supplies was for the time being very acute. Huge relief funds have been raised all over the country and the government has taken part in relief work in every way possible, sending army tents and establishing martial law in several places. Looting started in many places and government troops have shot several pilferers caught in the act. Many thousands are still homeless but the waters have receded from this region and the people face the problem of reestablishing themselves in water-soaked homes and business places, hopeful of the future and thankful to the people of the nation for sympathy and substantial help rendered during their great trial.

Sections of Pennsylvania and New York along the Hudson river also suffered from floods and towns further down the Ohio and Mississippi river valleys are experiencing trouble from high water as the floods pass down these channels to the Gulf.

County Road Men Meet.

The annual meeting of the road commissioners and selectmen of Orleans county was held at Orleans today.

The meeting opened at 10:30 o'clock, C. W. Gates of Franklin, state highway commissioner, gave a very interesting address in regard to the duties of the road commissioners and there was also a general discussion of section 4008 of the Public Statutes which explains the duties of the commissioners in respect to these meetings and provision for the expenses. Mr. Gates explained all the changes in the highway laws and of the present great demand for highway improvement throughout the state which he said would be met in no way so well as by cooperation. He told what the state would do to help town commissioners maintain good roads throughout each county in Vermont. The state gives a mile for the maintenance of better roads and a city or town the state will give from $100 to $150 toward the expenses of oiling the streets wherever this is the custom. He said that a commissioner should go over every mile of his portion every two weeks to take care of it and keep all water from lying in the road and also to keep all culverts and bridges in good condition and make a report of the same.

D. H. Winslow of Washington, D. C., United States superintendent of road construction, was present and gave a very interesting lecture with stereopticon views of Vermont roads.

"Life of Sidney Lanier," read by Miss Wheeler for Miss Potter. Vermont crossing games were played, conducted by Miss Ruggles and Miss Goss, after which the hostess served refreshments. It is requested that each member bring their earned dollar with a verse of poetry telling how the same was earned at the next meeting.

Some of the older inhabitants state that the lake was the highest during the recent high water that it has ever been. The tub shop was obliged to shut down for several days because of the water. It hardly seems necessary to add a weather item to what is said elsewhere in the columns about the local high water but for the benefit of readers in other states we might add that practically every bit of snow is gone. The frost is out of the ground in many places. Storm has made springing very difficult. Since Friday the weather has been cold except for a thunder shower on Monday, and an inch or more of snow has fallen but immediately disappeared. A heavy gale blew all of Tuesday night and this forenoon but the sky is now clear and we all hope for sunshine.

WILLOUGHBY

Olin C. Abbott was born in Wiloughby April 25, 1877, and died here on last Monday Mar. 31. He was the last of the three children of the late George W. and Elvira Abbott (Drown.) He had always lived here with the exception of two winters when he worked in the Lyndonville creamery and served a brief clerkship for H. T. Seaver at Barton. He was postmaster here and kept a grocery store for six or seven years. He was a young man of excellent habits and greatly respected by all. He was a great home lover and it is in the home he will be doubly missed and mourned. In 1908 he married Miss Myra E. Conner of Lyndonville, who has tenderly cared for him during his long period of invalidism. Never of robust health, he did not recover his former health and strength after a severe illness and operation two years ago, and consequently succumbed to his recent attack of pneumonia.
